EAT

GOAT ON WHEELS Various locations

Classic barbecue and goat meat isn't exactly a standard food pairing, but it's what's for lunch Thursday when Stephanie Izard hits Chicago's streets in the Lillie's Q Meat Mobile with her new cookbook, "Girl in the Kitchen: How a Top Chef Cooks, Thinks, Shops, Eats, and Drinks." The "Top Chef" alumna offers tastings from her cookbook (all free with book purchase), while Charlie McKenna from Lillie's Q serves his own grub. Follow @stephandthegoat for lunch location information or stop by Ethyl's Beer and Wine Dive for dinner (6-9 p.m., 324 S. Racine Ave.), where the food truck will be parked alongside the Gaztro-Wagon and Flirty Cupcakes.

NEW TREAT ON THE BLOCK

The Burlington 3425 W. Fullerton Ave. 773-384-3243

Sick of cupcakes? Get your sugar fix at Sweet Spot Macarons, the new food truck dishing out the famous French sandwich cookie individually or in packs of three. Stop by their launch party Thursday to try any one of six different flavors, and don't forget the brews—each confectionery comes with a special $1 PBR. 8-10 p.m. Prices vary.

DO

GLEEKS UNITE Gorilla Tango Theatre

1919 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-598-45449

If you haven't had a chance to catch up on "True Blood," "Twilight," "High School Musical" or "Glee" yet, check out the debut performance of "True Twilight: A Glee Club Musical." A funny musical parody of all four hits, the story follows a "Wiccan Park" resident who causes trouble when she auditions for a high school play and falls for both an undead charmer and a sexy shapeshifter. 8 p.m. $12.

DANCING QUEEN

Joe's Bar

940 W. Weed St.
312-337-3486

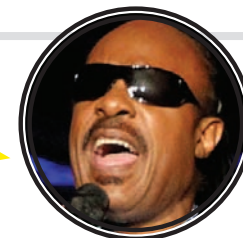

Watch more than 100 dancers pirouette, sashay, break dance and more at "Carnival: A Choreographers Ball." 9 p.m. $20.

Pride Parade sets new course

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Chicago Pride Parade organizers are planning to move up its start time, tweak the route and cap the number of entries—all moves to ensure the popular event stays in Boystown and goes on safely without a hitch.

Next year's event will start 10 a.m. instead of noon to discourage heavy drinking, parade coordinator Richard Pfeiffer said. Other city parades, such as the Bud Billiken parade, start at the same time.

Additionally, the route will be more spread out and lengthened by five blocks. The new route will start at Montrose Avenue and Broadway instead of Belmont Avenue and Halsted Street. It will go south on Broadway, flow into Halsted and then go south on Halsted to Belmont. From there, it will go east on Belmont to Broadway. The remainder of the route—south on Broadway to Diversey Parkway, then east to Cannon Drive—will be the same.

The new route will allow attendees to use the Wilson and Sheridan Red Line stops in addition to Addison and Belmont stations that have been used in years past. It also will dodge the V-neck of Halsted to Broadway, which Pfeiffer said landlocked people and could have caused a problem in an emergency situation.

Another change will limit the parade entries to 200—down from 250—to help keep the event at 2 1/2 hours long.

Mike Collins, the owner of F. O'Mahony's at 3701 N. Broadway, said Wednesday that moving the parade a block over to Halsted will affect his business "quite a bit" on the bar's busiest day.

"People come here every year to watch it from inside the bar," he said. "They won't be able to view the parade from this establishment."

An employee at The Unabridged Bookstore at 3251 N. Broadway said she wasn't entirely sure how the new parade route would affect the store, which in the past has closed its doors as the parade passed by.

Pfeiffer said he knows some businesses will be disappointed, but he noted the parade still brings people—an estimated 800,000 in 2011—to the community that day, and a good chunk of the parade remains on Broadway.

The changes came about after organizers met with city officials after the parade in June. Safety concerns were raised, and the changes are aimed at resolving them while keeping the parade in the neighborhood, Pfeiffer said.

"The bottom line was safety, to make this safe and fun for everybody," he said.

This is so dumb, dumb da-dumb

Katie Killacky
» redeye@tribune.com

My sister, Bridget, is getting married Saturday and I am co-maid of honor with my little sister, Maggie. I still haven't written my speech.

To add to my stress level, Maggie is a drunk savant and will probably come off so disgustingly charming that I will come off looking like the idiot sava ... er ... drunk.

In my panic a couple of days ago, I thought I had come up with a brilliant idea to make some sort of reference to the three sisters being like a shamrock and Brad, the groom, making us a complete four-leaf clover. Maggie, thankfully, told me this was lame. I then looked into hiring an impersonator of Kenny Rogers, Bridget's celebrity crush, but he was busy. And cost five grand. So I started YouTubing "maid of honor speeches" to help get my creative juices flowing.

There I sat, bawling like I was watching a marathon of "Extreme Makeover: The Biggest Loser Edition, Brought To You By Oprah." My sobfest was interrupted by some terribly corny jokes and obvious attempts to appear on "The Today Show" (was anyone else aware of the trend to rap the bride and groom's life stories to the tune of "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air"?), but overall, the speeches were genuine, albeit a bit formulaic. And they make sure to set themselves apart by all captioning their video "Best. Speech. Ever."

Maid of honor speeches have a general blueprint. They always start with a "for those of you who don't know me" intro. This makes the speaker look humble even though she knows damn well everyone knows who she is or that they can look in the program where it clearly states "College friend/Sister/Insecure cousin who would throw an adult temper tantrum if she wasn't asked." And if nothing else, it's safe to say everyone can surmise the bride asked her maid of honor to give a speech and not Aunt Judith from Poughkeepsie who she hasn't seen since she was 6. She then shares an embarrassing story from childhood that guests politely laugh at while inconspicuously checking their phones. Insert slightly crude statement regarding an inside joke (e.g., "... and you and I both know what happens when you don't wear clean underwear, don't we?") and end with some tear-jerky sentiment of how happy they are for the couple.

So why was I actually moved by watching the videos of these speeches? Because regardless of how cheesy or poorly read or incredibly bland they were, I was watching the bride and in every clip, she was looking on as though she was watching the Best. Speech. Ever.

So I am just going to introduce myself, tell an embarrassing blurb with a semi-crude joke, and probably cry as I look on at my beautiful big sister celebrating the biggest day of her life. And if it ends up being the worst toast of the night, at least I was able to use a highly circulated newspaper to publicly wish them the Best. Life. Ever.

Top that, Maggie.

BIKE-AND-TEXT BAN PASSES

Fines range from $20 to $500

Chicago Tribune

Bicyclists soon will face the same restrictions against texting while riding in Chicago as motorists do while behind the wheel.

The City Council on Wednesday passed an ordinance prohibiting bicyclists from texting while moving. They also cannot make cellphone calls unless using a hands-free device under an ordinance that passed the council without dissent. The ban will go into effect next month.

Fines will start at $20 for a first offense and go up to $100 for a third or subsequent violation. If an accident is involved, the fine could shoot up to $500.

Sponsoring Ald. Margaret Laurino (39th) said the issue is a matter of fairness as well as safety, since motorists already are prohibited from texting and making calls with hand-held devices in Chicago.

ACTION REACTION

RedEye staffers who bike weigh in on the new ban.

It's hard out there for Chicago bikers. We've gotta be on high alert for giant potholes and vindictive car doors, so taking texting out of the mix can only improve our chances of survival. Next up: Ban smartphoning while walking—then I wouldn't have almost mowed some down jerk ... err, pedestrian ... last week. —DANA MORAN

Should bikers get ticketed for texting on their bikes? Damn tootin' they should—it's dangerous! Does that mean the city will actually DO anything about it? Judging from the bikers I see who continue to ride on the sidewalks (insert rage here), I doubt anything will change. But, hey, that's Chicago for ya. —TRENT J. KOLAND

I'm comfortable with certain risky biking behaviors: listening to headphones, talking on the phone (hands-free, obvs) and cautiously coasting through the occasional red light. If you're coordinated enough to send LOLs while dodging potholes, avoiding glass, pretending to obey traffic signs and anticipating what every single car—especially you, 1992 Geo Tracker with the brown plastic windows—is about to do, then I say go for it. —MIKE RICH

CITY COUNCIL HIGHLIGHTS FROM WEDNESDAY

- » Ald. Lona Lane (18th) introduced a measure to give car owners the option of buying vehicle stickers good for two years instead of just one. The city clerk's office is considering the logistics, enforcement issues and budget effects that would result, spokeswoman Kristine Williams said.
- » Ald. Ameya Pawar (47th) introduced a plan to charge organizers of festivals that take in more than $50,000 for city permits and services.
- » The council signed off on a Mayor Emanuel proposal that will limit to 30 the maximum number of untaken vacation days workers can be paid for when they leave city employment. It's now 75. TRIBUNE

Occupy Chicago protests continue

Chicago Tribune

As their kindred spirits in New York City drew thousands to Wall Street, those involved in the almost 2-week-old protest Occupy Chicago say they're seeing growing numbers here coming out to oppose undue corporate influence in U.S. government policy.

Centering their efforts on the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, those taking part in Occupy Chicago run the gamut from liberals to Libertarians to the politically uncommitted, angry about government bailouts of corporations.

"We're here for justice — our sign says it all, and our sign says, 'Stop government crimes,'" said Chris Fogarty, as he stood with his wife, Mary O'Sullivan, at Jackson Boulevard and LaSalle Street. "And the other side says, 'Restore our laws.'"

The protests have been running 24 hours since they started 13 days ago. When she joined the protests on their fourth day, Evelyn DeHais, 24 — now among the media spokespeople for the organizers — saw about 70 people attending the protests at their peak time.

In more recent days, she claimed the peak attendance sometimes reached about 400.

Organizers don't know when they will end the protests.

TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM | @TRACYSWARTZ

Burnside saw two homicides last week, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

A 53-year-old man died from injuries he sustained from a fight Friday in the 9300 block of South University Avenue, officials said. Two days earlier, a 32-year-old man was shot to death in the 9400 block of South Avalon Avenue, police said.

Burnside has recorded three homicides so far this year, RedEye data shows. The South Side community area logged one homicide last year, according to data.

Citywide, gunshot homicides were recorded in the past week in Belmont Cragin, Chatham and Washington Heights, RedEye determined.

Meanwhile, September ended last week with 38 homicides, up from 31 homicides in September 2010, according to RedEye data.

Three homicides have been recorded so far this month. Police recorded 35 homicides in October 2010, RedEye found.

Jackson heard slurring speech on recording

1 Jurors at the Los Angeles trial of Michael Jackson's personal physician heard a recording Wednesday of the singer sounding heavily drugged six weeks before his death.

In the recording discovered on Dr. Conrad Murray's iPhone, Jackson rambled to his doctor about his upcoming comeback concerts and plans to build a hospital for children.

"God wants me to do it. I'm gonna do it, Conrad," the singer said in slurred words. "I know you would," Murray replied.

Palin won't run for White House

4 WASHINGTON Sarah Palin said Wednesday that she will not seek the Republican presidential nomination in 2012, ending months of doubt and leaving the Republican field largely settled.

Palin had shown little sign of joining the race to challenge President Obama but made it official in a letter to supporters and in an interview with conservative talk radio host Mark Levin.

"After much prayer and serious consideration, I have decided that I will not be seeking the 2012 GOP nomination for president of the United States," she said in the letter.

Palin's star had faded since her opening days as John McCain's vice presidential nominee in 2008 when she burst onto the scene as a relative unknown and quickly became a conservative star and promoted herself as a "mama grizzly."

She has been polling far behind the main challengers for the Republican nomination—Mitt Romney, Rick Perry and Herman Cain—and most Palin-watchers had long since concluded that she was not going to run based on a series of equivocating statements.

Her announcement came a day after New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie opted against running. The only woman in the 2012 race now is Minnesota Congresswoman Michele Bachmann, who is popular with the same social conservatives who find Palin an electrifying presence.

In her letter, Palin said "my family comes first" and that her decision was based on what she was able to accomplish in congressional elections last year when her support for several Tea Party conservative candidates helped propel them to victory.

HESTER RUNS AWAY WITH IT

Devin Hester was named NFC special teams player of the week after setting an NFL record with his 11th career punt return touchdown. He totaled 142 return yards in Sunday's win over Carolina, including his 69-yard TD return. It's the 10th time Hester has won the honor.

Huddle up, Bulls

5 players who could do some damage on the gridiron

RedEye

So apparently not EVERYONE in Ohio wishes LeBron James would just stay in Florida. The Miami Heat star participated in football practice at his high school alma mater, St. Vincent St. Mary in Akron, Ohio, on Tuesday. "He caught everything, he didn't drop a pass," quarterback Kevin Besser told Fox 8 in Cleveland. "I probably threw six or seven passes his way and he went up and got everything." James, an all-state receiver in high school, wore full pads for the practice. But the players were not allowed to tackle him, so there was at least one strike against him. Not to be outdone, we're thinking several Bulls could have success on the gridiron too.

Derrick Rose

Kick returner

Just as Devin Hester specializes in open-field running, Rose could make a living by making people miss. We envision lots of would-be tacklers grasping at air. Or if he wants, he could just jump over them.

Joakim Noah

Defensive end

A ferocious, relentless Noah bearing down on the opposing quarterback would be a welcome sight for any Bears fan. Good luck trying to throw over his 6-foot-11 frame—and his menacing hairdo.

Carlos Boozer

Wide receiver

Boozer reminds us of a taller Steve Smith—the Carolina receiver who torched the Bears for 181 yards Sunday—because they both like yelling and flexing their muscles. Just keep the gym bags away from Boozer's feet.

Keith Bogans

Center

Bogans' job usually is to pass to his teammates and set screens, making center his ideal position. He also is asked to get physical with some of the other team's best players, so why not do the same in football?

Luol Deng

Quarterback

With his calm, unselfish style of play, Deng is the guy you want commanding the huddle. He's also very Jay Cutler-like in his ability to play through pain, which is a must when the Bears' offensive line is involved.

In what could be the biggest card in 2011, there will be two title fights Saturday at UFC 136 in Houston (8 p.m., pay per view). It's rare to see two title bouts on the same night, so we are in for a treat. Here's how I think they'll play out, along with three other fights worth watching.

Leonard Garcia vs. Nam Phan

This is an "Ultimate Fighter 12" rematch. Garcia won that fight, but many didn't agree with the decision. Phan showed excellent stand-up in that fight and Garcia had chances to end it.

Prediction: Phan via guillotine choke

Joe Lauzon vs. Melvin Guillard

After a speed bump against George Sotiropoulos in his quest for a title shot, Lauzon looks to put together another winning streak. Guillard is on a five-match win streak and could get a title shot with a victory. Lauzon's best chance to win is to get the fight to the ground.

Prediction: Lauzon via kimura

Chael Sonnen vs. Brian Stann

The biggest trash-talker in the sport returns after a 14-month hiatus to take on Stann, a former Marine. Many want to ignore the fact Sonnen has been absent for such a long period, but "ring rust" does exist. The winner likely will take on champion Anderson Silva in the near future.

Prediction: Stann via KO (punches)

Jose Aldo vs. Kenny Florian

Aldo, the featherweight champion, hasn't lost since 2005. Florian is a newcomer to the division and beat Diego Nunes to earn this title shot. Aldo possesses massive leg kicks that will slow down any fighter. Florian has an excellent ground game and isn't afraid to go to his specialty, the rear-naked choke.

Prediction: Aldo via decision

Gray Maynard vs. Frankie Edgar

The final installment of this feud ends Saturday. Maynard has never lost, but many see him as fighter who can't finish. Lightweight champ Edgar has only one loss and has successfully defended his title twice. Even though the last bout between them was a draw, both fighters were close to finishing.

Prediction: Maynard via KO (punches)

A NUDE HOPE

If you haven't seen enough of Hope Solo on the field or on "Dancing with the Stars," ESPN The Magazine's latest Body Issue offers a glimpse of quite a bit more. The U.S. women's soccer goalkeeper poses nude on one of four covers. Snowboarder Gretchen Bleiler, N.Y. Mets shortstop Jose Reyes and L.A. Clippers forward Blake Griffin also have covers, and the Chicago Sky's Sylvia Fowles is featured in the gallery as well. Needless to say, every athlete's, er, muscles are quite impressive.

Grab a microphone

What's the next best thing to going to the Super Bowl? It might be going to Media Day. The NFL said Wednesday that 5,000 people will be allowed into Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis on Jan. 31, when reporters interview players from the two teams. The fans will join roughly 3,000 accredited media members at the circus-like event. Tickets will be available in early December; prices have not been announced. Finding a parking spot should be much easier, at any rate.

Who's that squirrel?

Never mind that St. Louis pushed Philadelphia to a Game 5 in the NLDS with its win Wednesday—there was a squirrel on the field at Busch Stadium! This was the third time one of the rodents was spotted at Busch. And to no one's surprise a Twitter account attributed to the squirrel (@BuschSquirrel) has been active since Tuesday.

Digital pioneer leaves a lasting legacy

Los Angeles Times

Steve Jobs, the tech titan who co-founded Apple and transformed one industry after another—from computers and smartphones to music and movies—died Wednesday. He was 56.

“We are deeply saddened to announce that Steve Jobs passed away today,” Apple said in a statement. “Steve’s brilliance, passion and energy were the source of countless innovations that enrich and improve all of our lives. The world is immeasurably better because of Steve.”

Jobs had resigned as chief executive of Apple in August, after struggling with illness for nearly a decade, including a bout with pancreatic cancer in 2003 and a liver transplant years later. His legacy includes the Apple II, Macintosh, iMac, iPod, iPhone and iPad.

Few companies were as tied to their leaders as Apple was with Jobs, who co-founded the computer maker in his parents’ Silicon Valley garage in 1976, and decades later rescued it from near-bankruptcy and turned it into the world’s most valuable tech outfit.

Jobs always said he wanted make “a dent in the universe,” part of his message that technology was a tool to improve human life and unleash creativity.

“His ability to always come around and figure out where that next bet should be has been phenomenal,” Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates said of Jobs in 2007. »

THE LEGEND

Visitors to apple.com on Wednesday saw a somber, black-and-white portrait of Steve Jobs stroking his beard. Clicking on the photo brought up a short remembrance: “Apple has lost a visionary and creative genius, and the world has lost an amazing human being.” DOW JONES NEWSWIRES

APPLE'S HITS & MISSES

FROM THE APPLE II TO THE IPAD, APPLE INTRODUCED ONE INNOVATION AFTER ANOTHER, AND A FEW FLOPS TOO. LOS ANGELES TIMES

Apple II (1977)

The machine that launched the personal computer industry. It came with a keyboard, monitor and two disk drives.

Lisa (1983)

The Lisa featured a mouse, windows and menus. At $10,000, no one could afford it.

Macintosh (1984)

The Macintosh immediately stood out as easier to use than the command-based IBM personal computer.

iPod (2001)

The portable player introduced the possibility of carrying an entire music collection in your pocket. More than 300 million have been sold.

iPad (2010)

Despite skepticism, the iPad tablet was a hit from the start, with 7 million sold in less than a year.

iPhone (2007)

The revolutionary device merged phone, music player and computer into a stylish package. About 130 million have been sold.

iMac (1998)

It debuted in translucent plastic "bondi blue," followed by five candy colors: blueberry, strawberry, lime, tangerine and grape. About 2.7 million iMacs sold in the first two years.

Power Mac G4 Cube (2000)

A visually stunning 8-inch machine packaged in a translucent white case, it suffered from a rash of problems.

» Few careers traced a more mythic sweep than Jobs' did. An adopted child in a working-class California home, he dropped out of college and won the title "father of the computer revolution" by the age of 29. But by 30 he had been forced out of the company he had created.

Once he returned to the company, however, he trotted out a series of innovations—unveiling them with matchless showmanship—that quickly became everywhere. With him, the release of a new gadget was a cultural event.

Jobs' meteoric rise all started in high school in Cupertino, Calif., where he met Steve Wozniak, a technical wizard who was in and out of college.

In April 1976, the two launched Apple Computer out of that garage, reproducing Wozniak's circuit board as their first product.

Whether pitching a product or wooing a job candidate, Jobs liked to paint what he was selling as part of a revolution, an idea that reverberates in Silicon Valley start-ups to this day.

With the iPod's release, Jobs lighted the way for the entertainment industry in the digital age. The iPod became Apple's most popular product and soon captured about 70 percent of the market for digital music players.

Two years later, through deals that Jobs brokered with the recording industry, Apple opened its iTunes online store, the country's No. 1 music retailer.

With iTunes—which expanded to selling movies, TV shows, books and games—Jobs transformed Apple from a computer maker into one of the primary gatekeepers for the explosion of online media.

The iPhone gave the cellphone a touch screen and a Web browser in 2007, and it enabled the growth of a booming industry of small mobile games and applications.

Last year, Apple released the iPad tablet computer, a wireless reading, gaming and Web-surfing slate that sold nearly 7 million units in less than a year.

Jobs always presented himself as an outsider even at the top of American business, a convention-bucking visionary who was willing to wade into new industries to do battle with movie studios, record labels and cellphone giants. He nearly always appeared in public wearing a black turtleneck, worn jeans and sneakers.

An intensely private person, Jobs rarely discussed his personal life and had little taste for the trappings of celebrity.

For years, his health was an issue that wouldn't go away. Although he was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer in 2003, he did not reveal his illness for nine months, according to a Fortune magazine report. He finally agreed to surgery in 2004, the first of several procedures including a liver transplant in 2008.

In a Stanford commencement speech in 2005, Jobs spoke at length about mortality and its value as a force against complacency.

"Death is very likely the best invention of life," he said in the speech. "All pride, all fear of embarrassment or failure, these things just fall away in the face of death, leaving only what is truly important."

SHORT TAKES

THE LOWDOWN ON FARMHOUSE AND THE OWL

By Emily Van Zandt

REDEYE

Two of the latest additions to the Chicago nightlife scenes may seem new, but their formula will feel familiar: In River North, Farmhouse is serving up a mix of local brews and Midwestern fare in a cozy atmosphere that mimics similar local tavern concepts. And the Owl is proving once again that a Logan Square address and a late night license are a killer combination when it comes to drawing crowds. We stopped by the two bars to see what makes them stand out from the competition.

FARMHOUSE

228 W. Chicago Ave. 312-280-4960

The drinks: The beer list is impressive. More than 25 on draft, including a personal favorite, Boulevard's Tank 7 Farmhouse Ale. The focus remains on regional brews from Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan. Not in the mood for beer? Drink options also include a handful of house cocktails, such as the John Deere Beer ($8), a mix of rooibos tea, Hum and a white ale. Wine options include a red and white house wine available on draft. The Domaine Berrian merlot wasn't impressive—a little too sweet—but at $6 a glass, the price was right.

The bites: The real draw at Farmhouse seems to be the food, with most patrons settling down to a late dinner rather than ordering rounds of drinks on the Friday we stopped by. The bar snacks and appetizer list seemed hearty enough to make a meal out of, and the mac'n' cheese fritters ($8) were surprisingly un-greasy with a barbecue cream sauce adding just enough kick. When my friend and I ordered a salad and the trout to split, the kitchen served it up on two personal plates without even asking—a nice touch. The trout ($18) was fresh and flavorful with the melted leeks adding a surprising burst of bitterness that worked well.

The scene: Think a 30-and-older crowd out for dinner, mixed with a few area workers stopping in for a drink before heading just a few feet to grab the Brown Line home.

Bottom line: Farmhouse is doing everything right, but it still feels unoriginal. Local beer list? Seasonal, Midwestern-inspired dishes? Communal seating with animal-centric art? Where have we seen this before?

The Owl

THE OWL

2521 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-235-5300

The drinks: This beer-centric hang doesn't serve food, so think ahead if you plan to drink heavily (or carry-in from a nearby restaurant). The draft and bottled beer selection includes a little something for everyone from Stella to Three Floyds to Framboise. Daily drink specials include $2 and $3 beers Tuesdays and $3.50 Stella Artois tallboys Wednesdays. The beer menu is good, but the bar falls solidly into the beer/shot/well drink category.

The scene: Dark and cozy on a hot stretch of Milwaukee Avenue in Logan Square, The Owl is located in the former home of a late-night nightclub. While the atmosphere and clientele certainly have changed (you won't find much dancing now from the hipster crowd now), much has stayed the same, including an incredible 50-foot bar with a curious (and bathroom run-inducing) waterfall fountain behind it. The bar seems on the divey side, like it's been there for years. Other than then intensely hipster crowd, there's nothing particularly striking about the spot.

The bottom line: Despite only being open for a few weeks, The Owl was packed by 9:30 p.m. on a recent Friday night. The music pumping over the speakers was a decent mix of indie favorites and a few '50s and '60s hits, and the staff was friendly. Did we have to wait for service? Sure. When we tried to get our check at around 10:30 p.m., it took about 10 minutes of leaning over the bar. And the wait probably got worse as the clocked dragged on. Thanks to its late-night license (it's open until 4 a.m. weekdays and 5 a.m. Saturdays) and Logan Square location, don't expect the buzz around The Owl to go away any time soon—this hang-out is going to continue to draw a neighborhood crowd.

Everyone gets a little drunk

Emily Van Zandt

» redeye@tribune.com
» @mmxbars

Ira Glass and Gwyneth Paltrow got trashed.

(Not together, unfortunately. That would have made for one hell of a GOOP news-letter.)

And while the idea of stars knocking back a few too many is nothing new, Mr. NPR and Mrs.

Coldplay revealing their day-after woes to all of the Interwebs struck me as odd—and awesome.

Ira Glass, the voice behind “This American Life,” has never seemed more relatable than when he showed up on the podcast “WTF With Marc Maron” and confessed that he not only got drunk onstage with Rachel Maddow at a New York comedy festival—he blacked out. As Glass recounted waking up the next day in his clothes, smelling faintly of vomit, remember only 15 minutes of his time on stage, I realized I’d never loved him more.

If Glass, that bespectacled icon of indie radio, can cop to not only being drunk, but so drunk he doesn’t remember being the base of a human pyramid, then I’m pretty sure I need to cut it out with the “did I say anything stupid last night?” text message routine.

I’m not endorsing wild binge drinking here, but everyone who drinks will at some point be drunk. Or at least a little tipsy. And you’ll talk a little too much. You’ll dance a little too much. You might even need a little help remembering your address.

It happens.

So do hangovers. Last week, Gwyneth Paltrow took to Twitter to complain about her rough morning after celebrating her 39th birthday: “Nursing a horrific hangover at the jfk. Nothing like starting an overseas flight dehydrated. Where is the dog, I need the hair.”

I’ll say this once and never, ever say it again: Let’s take a page out of the GOOP-sters book. A hangover is a hangover. It’s not a migraine. It’s not food poisoning. Grab your Vitamin Water like a big kid and get to work. Or grab a few painkillers and work a half day—but at the very least, own up to what you’ve done.

You went, you drank, you’re suffering. And you’re in good company—if Ira Glass and Gwyneth Paltrow can own it, so can we.

Ira Glass

Stephanie Izard at her restaurant, Girl & the Goat
BILL HOGAN/TRIBUNE

The girl and the cookbook

Stephanie Izard is one busy goat-loving girl these days. The “Top Chef” winner is still packing hungry fans into her 15-month-old West Loop restaurant, Girl & the Goat, and she’s working on another restaurant—Little Goat, her take on a classic diner—to open next spring. Her first cookbook, “Girl in the Kitchen” dropped Wednesday. To promote it, she’s riding along with the Lillie’s Q food truck and dropping by the Truckin’ Thursdays meet-up (see Page 2 for details) before setting off on a national book tour. We talked by phone with Izard while she autographed cookbooks ($29.95 at stephanieizard.com) for her Wednesday launch party.

Which is harder, writing a cookbook or competing on “Top Chef”?

Writing a cookbook. There are so many things that chefs just take for granted ... and when I’m at home cooking for friends, I don’t sit there measuring teaspoons of soy sauce or tablespoons of dijon, but when you’re doing a cookbook, of course you have to. .... On “Top Chef” you just sort of go for it and cross your fingers. But I would say this: I’m planning on doing another cookbook but not planning on doing “Top Chef” again, let’s put it that way!

You’re riding along with the Lillie’s Q food truck Thursday. Will we ever see, say, an all-goat food truck from you someday?

We’ve thought about it when I was on Gaztro-Wagon a few weeks ago, and it was so much fun. All these people can just come out from their offices and just find you for lunch. [It’s] something we definitely have in the back of our minds. I think for now we’ll just get the diner open and focus on that.

Are you ready to head out on your tour?

We just got the T-shirts for it, it’s like a tour T-shirt you’d get at a concert! We’re going to about 15 cities and ... I’m joining forces with some of my chef friends in each city and doing dinners to raise money for Share our Strength.

Are you meeting up with any fellow “Top Chef” pals?

The first one I’ll be seeing is Spike Mendelsohn. We are doing something in D.C. at his pizza place; we’re going to do a fun pizza party and my pizza will be inspired by the cookbook. It should be a good time, I haven’t seen him in a while! -LISA ARNETT, REDEYE

NEW MUSIC

Shake It Out

Florence and the Machine, "Ceremonials"

I missed the initial Florence and the Machine hype wave.

Honestly, I'm glad I did. That way, you can listen to the music objectively with no one screaming, "Why don't you like this! It's the best thing EVER," in your face. Florence Welch is a mighty fine singer who is backed by an almost-choral sound on her new single, "Shake It Out." The second premiere off the group's new album "Ceremonials" is a very moving piece of empowerment that I can see being the soundtrack for tons of inspirational commercials and Hallmark movies of the week. I will say this though, Florence. Annie Lennox called. She wants her swag back. Buy her a drink next time you see her or something.

"[Augie's] the class clown of the squad and [Tim's] the class clown of the cast."
— 'Prime Suspect' executive producer
Alexandra Cunningham, on Tim Griffin

'Prime' star a perfect fit

SHOW PATROL

» @showpatrol

When Tim Griffin first auditioned for a role in NBC's "Prime Suspect," he read for a completely different part than that of NYPD Det. Augie Blando.

But after meeting the veteran character actor, producers Peter Berg and Alexandra Cunningham asked him to try out for Irish cop Augie.

"Now that I've done this part, it's the only part I can see that I ever should have been playing," the 42-year-old Chicago native told me. "Given my family history—I'm Timothy Collins Griffin—it's like it couldn't have been a better match."

The affable Griffin has a point. During our hour-long phone conversation, in which he told plenty of stories about growing up in Lincoln Park and his past movie roles, he showed the same playful sense of humor that Augie uses to keep things light even during the darkest of homicide investigations.

"Tim is one of the funniest people I've ever met in my life," said the show's star, Maria Bello. "He makes me laugh every single day."

Bello plays Det. Jane Timoney, a gruff taskmaster who initially alienates Augie and the other male detectives, in "Prime Suspect," which is based on the British series of the same name starring Helen Mirren.

Bello and Griffin had co-starred in two films prior to getting "Prime Suspect." When they saw each other on set, they couldn't believe it. "We just had a natural rapport," he said. "We're all like brothers and sisters now."

"Abduction" and "Carjacked," the two films he did with Bello, are not Griffin's only big screen roles this year. He also appeared in "Conception" with Julie Bowen and David Arquette, "Super 8" with Kyle Chandler, and the latest film from director Chris Weitz, titled "A Better Life."

That's a whole lot of acting for a guy who sort of accidentally fell into the profession.

As a fifth grader, he gained the attention of Chicago casting agents when he starred in a school production of "Oliver Twist." It led to acting in local stage productions from the Goodman and Body Politic theaters, among others. But he wasn't convinced he wanted to act for a living, so he went to college at the University of Vermont where he double majored in English and political science, but kept acting as a hobby with a group called the University Players.

Tim Griffin as Augie Blando on 'Prime Suspect.'

In summer 1988, Griffin, a sophomore, was driving home to Chicago when his car broke down outside of New York City. So he called his best friend's mom, Maureen Brookman, a Chicago agent he had worked with in the past, who told him about auditions for an After School Special called "Taking a Stand."

"I ended up auditioning for it and winning this role," he said, chuckling. "And people were actually mad at me, like, 'Who is this

Prime Suspect
9 p.m.
Thursdays, NBC

frickin' kid? Where'd he come from?"

"And I said, 'I'm from Chicago. My car just broke down here.'"

His experience on that film and several other TV gigs that summer convinced him to pursue acting, so he moved to L.A. with a mandate that he had one year to become a legitimate actor.

The rest, as they say, is history. He appeared in tons of TV shows before being cast by John Singleton in the film "Higher Learning." He's gone on to star in such movies as "Cloverfield," "Star Trek," "Leatherheads," "Men Who Stare at Goats" and "The Bourne Supremacy" (where Matt Damon broke Griffin's nose).

With this year's "Abduction," he was reunited with Singleton.

"Now 20 years later, we're doing 'Abduction' together," he said. "You know what I mean? I'm just a this Chicago boy; it's sort of crazy."

Do You Have Bipolar I Disorder?

Participants Needed for a Lithium Treatment Study

Have you been diagnosed with Bipolar I Disorder? If the answer to this question is yes, then you may be eligible to participate in a clinical research study that involves using lithium as a treatment for Bipolar I Disorder. Study participants will receive the highest standard of care. Participants will be paid. You can participate if you are:

- 18 years or older and have been diagnosed with Bipolar I Disorder.
- Willing to travel to the University of Chicago to receive psychiatric care.
- Covered by insurance or able to pay for standard treatment services including physician visits, routine lab work and medication costs.

Our goal is to identify genes that predict how a particular patient will respond to the treatment of Bipolar I Disorder using lithium.

Participants may be in this study for two-and-a-half years. The principal investigator is Dr. Elliot Gershon.

The League

9:30 p.m. Thursday, FX

The new season of FX's hilarious comedy "The League" is starting later than it would have because of the threatened NFL lockout. The premiere's title, "The Lockout," may have been inspired by real events, but has nothing to do with them.

It's actually related to a porn movie.

If you think that plot line doesn't sound like it belongs in a comedy about friends in a fantasy football league, you haven't watched it in the past. The beauty of this series from husband/wife team Jeff Schaffer and Jackie Marcus Schaffer is its surprises. You just never know what to expect, except to laugh out loud at all the inappropriate humor.

The season opens with reigning league champion Ruxin (Nick Kroll) choosing to hold the new season's draft at Andre's (Paul Scheer) apartment, but with a twist that involves the gang meeting Rafi's (Jason Mantzoukas) porn-making pal Dirty Randy (guest star Seth Rogen).

To say more would be to spoil, so I'll only add that in its third season "The League" is sharper and raunchier than ever, and the aforementioned cast members, as well as Mark Duplass, Jon Lajoie, Stephen Rannazzisi and Katie Aselton, score TDs with nearly every line. Some examples: "Pile into your clown car of lies..." And, "The dude who looks like an illiterate Wolverine."

There are so many more we can't print here.

Bromance in bloom

Los Angeles Times

A big Hollywood production can make for strange bedfellows. "Real Steel," the Hugh Jackman fighting-robot movie that opens this weekend, made a truly odd one: it cemented a bond between Sugar Ray Leonard and Jackman co-star Anthony Mackie.

How did the classically trained actor and the world-champion boxer come to meet? Leonard was training "Steel" star Hugh Jackman and choreographing the film's robot fights when the two struck up a relationship.

"After talking to him, he's kind of one of the nicest guys that you would think about punching you in the face over and over again," Mackie told 24 Frames at the "Real Steel" premiere Sunday.

The actor also read Leonard's memoir, "The Big Fight," and it made him realize that the boxer's life would make "an amazing movie" in which he'd like to star.

Leonard, who has had a bit of an on-screen career himself (he appeared as himself in "The Fighter" last year, for instance), returned the favor by endorsing a Mackie portrayal. "That would be awesome," he said.

Mackie has spent the past five years developing a film about another iconic black athlete, Jesse Owens. Though the project may not be making its way to the big screen at the speed of an Olympic sprinter, Mackie still has hopes for the project, calling Jonathan Demme his "dream" director.

Mackie, who has expressed frustration before about the scarcity of roles for black actors in Hollywood, is hoping an independent film like the Owens biopic could allow him greater freedom than a conventional Hollywood production. Known for indie roles in films such as "Half Nelson" and "The Hurt Locker," Mackie is taking a step into a studio realm: in addition to "Steel," he has roles in upcoming big-budget pictures such as "Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter" and "Gangster Squad."

Mackie will be honored at the Chicago International Film Festival, which starts Thursday, with the Artistic Achievement Award at its Black Perspective Tribute.

Dark, fast and fun

Dark Souls PS3, Xbox 360

!!!! In a video gaming world that values user-friendliness and experience over challenge, "Dark Souls" feels like a relic from a different time. The third-person action/role-player features an absurdly hard difficulty level, a head-scratching fantasy story about an undead hero and even graphics that look straight out of 2006. You'll die time and time again while traversing the medieval world of Lodran with its dungeons full of evil skeletons and giants, but if you're the hardest of hard-core gamers, "Dark Souls" can be profoundly rewarding. No other modern entertainment gives you quite the feeling of satisfaction for accomplishing a goal or defeating a dragon like this beast of a game. RYAN SMITH REVIEWS FOR REDEYE

F1 2011 PS3, Xbox 360, PC

There are plenty of racing titles coming out this fall, but Formula One fans who like realism in their driving games will want to burn rubber to the store to pick up "F1 2011." Luckily, they've put in assists such as traction control and braking help if you need it, because the game's attention to detail means you can't just boot up the game and instantly win a checkered flag. Knowing how hard to push your tires, when to pit and other details are key in winning. The best addition from last year's "F1" game is a new co-op mode that lets you play the game with a friend.

X-Men: Destiny PS3, Xbox 360, Wii

There are some interesting ideas in "X-Men: Destiny," but the game itself doesn't quite live up to the premise. The story takes place after the death of Professor Xavier as you stand at a memorial peace rally in San Francisco for the fallen mutant leader. Instead of casting you as one of the X-Men's regular stars, you choose from one of three unknown young superheroes-to-be. But as cool as that sounds, the combat is repetitive, the graphics are so-so and the missions are relatively boring. Instead of spending $60 on this one, rewatch "X-Men: First Class."

Top German model-turned-actress Diane Kruger possesses a sort of fashion diversity, artfully playing with classics and taking risks. At a recent InStyle soiree in L.A., Kruger donned a Jason Wu menswear-inspired ensemble that included a blue tuxedo-style blazer, white button-up, black bow tie and trouser shorts. She balanced the menswear look with some feminine details—note the tuxedo color and fit, strappy sandal heels and tousled locks.

Try the menswear look for your next party in a fitted blazer with a feminine touch such as the Chiffon back blazer from nastygal.com for $68 that features a sheer back. For something bolder, try the Silence & Noise boyfriend blazer for $78 from urbanoutfitters.com. Get Kruger's tuxedo shirt look with the Jones New York pleated button down from jny.com for $36.99 or the Loft tuxedo shirt from loft.com for $44.50. If you want to go for a bow tie, you'll need the collared American Eagle boyfriend shirt for $39.50 from ae.com.

Bow ties can be a playful addition to any collared shirt or the perfect dress-up accessory. Snag the All Saints Spitalfields elder bow tie for $15 or for a shiny, dressier version, the American Apparel unisex sateen bow tie for $19 from americanapparel.com.

To get Kruger's cropped-tuxedo look, get the Ya Los Angeles turning leaves trouser short from piperlime.com for $49, Matelot trouser short from forever21.com for $15.80 or the Charcoal shorts from needsupply.com for $38.

Finish the outfit with a strappy pair of sandals to give the ensemble a girly feel. For a lower heel try the Naya Tova sandals from zappos.com in deep sea green/sea spray green leather for $83.88. For something with a little more height, get the BCBGeneration midnight blue strappy heels for $66 from bluefly.com or the Madeline Reba wedge sandal from amazon.com for $43.90-$60, depending on the size.

Jones New York pleated button-down from jny.com for $36.99

Vend but don't break

Chicago Tribune

In an office building, vending machines typically are stocked with goodies to appeal to every sweet tooth, salt craving and "get me out of this slump" snacker. But in an ideal world, the vending machine would be able to satisfy your craving and also be good for your body. We asked nutritionists which foods they would stock in their dream vending machines. Below are the goods, dealt by registered dietitians Lisa Young, author of "The Portion Teller Plan: The No-Diet Reality Guide to Eating, Cheating and Losing Weight Permanently;" Jackie Newgent, author of the "Big Green Cookbook;" and Elizabeth Somer, author of nearly a dozen books including "Eat Your Way to Happiness." Try throwing some of these in your desk drawer. You won't even need exact change.

IN-SHELL CALIFORNIA PISTACHIOS

Aka the skinny nut, these are one of the low-calorie nuts, with only 3 calories per nut. Recent research shows that people snacking on in-shell pistachios ate 41 percent fewer calories than those who consumed shelled nuts.

—Newgent

ORANGE JUICE

Reach for this instead of a soda, and you'll get a vending machine beverage rich in vitamin C, potassium, folate and an orchestra of phytonutrients, which lower your risk of heart disease and some cancers. —Somer

BAKED POTATO CHIPS

It's an easy switch from fried to baked, and they taste nearly as good. The baked version has about 1.5 grams of fat and 110 calories per 1-ounce bag compared with the fried bag, which has about 10 grams of fat and 150 calories for the same serving size. —Young

WHOLE WHEAT PRETZELS

Get your fiber and whole grains fill with an ounce of this crunchy snack.

—Young

DARK CHOCOLATE BAR

Dark chocolate provides flavonoids, which have cardiovascular benefits. Stick to a 100-calorie bar. —Newgent

DRIED FIGS

They're known for their excellent fiber content—one-quarter cup provides 5 grams of fiber. They also contain more calcium, potassium and iron than many other fruits. They're perfect for a sweet craving. —Newgent

who will OOPS FACTOR

These celeb dudes have got some 'splainin' to do

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

What is it with guys this week? Everywhere we look, famous men are putting their feet in the mouths. Some of them have wised up and apologized, but we used our imaginations to find the real meaning behind their mea culpas. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM

JOHNNY DEPP

Apologizing for comments made to Vanity Fair comparing photo shoots to being raped

What he said:

"I understand there is no comparison and I am very regretful. In an effort to correct my lack of judgment, please accept my heartfelt apology."

What he really meant: "OK, I admit, that was a major oops. But I'm still making 80 times more money than any of you suckers."

SIMON COWELL

Clarifying comments he made about anything less than 20 million "X Factor" viewers being a disaster; the show currently pulls about 12 million

What he said:

"As much as people want you to succeed, there's a ton of people that want you to fail and I took a bit in the neck that first day."

What he really meant: "QUIT BRINGING THIS UP, I AM SIMON COWELL, HOW DARE YOU QUESTION ME?!?"

DIDDY

Tweeting an apology for calling a fellow clubgoer out over his choice in vodka

What he said:

"I'm sorry for the ignorant way I [represented] myself and us ... To all my [children] of God ... I have backslid and regressed."

What he really meant: "Guys, I really miss the good old days when all of us just drank Cristal and got along."

HANK WILLIAMS JR.

Saying sorry on his website for statements he made comparing President Obama to Adolf Hitler, which resulted in his theme song to "Monday Night Football" being pulled

What he said:

"The thought of the Leaders of both Parties Jukin and High Fiven on a Golf course, while so many Families are Struggling to get by simply made me Boil over and make a Dumb statement."

What he really meant: "OK, OK, maybe Hitler was a little too far. But he's DEFINITELY at least Benito Mussolini-level, only with more high-fiving."

NICK SWARDSON

Whose movie, "Bucky Larson," earned a 0 percent rating on Rotten Tomatoes

What he said:

"None of those reviewers was psyched to see 'Bucky Larson' and laugh. They go in with the mentality, [bleep] these guys for making another movie."

What he really meant:

"Sorry you didn't think my awesome movie was funny, jerks! My mom totally loved it and still thinks I'm special!"

"IT'S CLEARLY NOT A DANCE COMPETITION."

— Kristin Cavallari, to eonline.com, after she was eliminated Tuesday from "Dancing With the Stars"

Doggfather knows best

Cue the laugh track-izzle. NBC has purchased the rights to a sitcom starring Snoop Dogg as a father of a bunch of misfit children, thr.com reports. Other details are scarce, but we're all eager to see Snoop deliver some fatherly advice.

Swine sense

Finally, Miss Piggy can unleash her wrath on someone other than Kermit. The Muppet will join Pharrell Williams and Miranda Kerr as guest judges on "Project Runway All Stars," Reuters reports. The season kicks off Nov. 3 on Lifetime. Hiiii-ya!

NO. 1

That's where J. Cole's first album, "Cole World: the Sideline Story," debuted this week on the Billboard 200 chart. The rapper performs Sunday at the House of Blues in Chicago.

6 YEARS, 4 MONTHS

That's how long it took Rihanna to chart her 20th Billboard Hot 100 single in the Top 10 after "We Found Love" landed at No. 9. That broke the record of 6 years, 9 months, previously held by Madonna.
